

Charles Borden

During the first decade of this century, Charles Borden left one of America's greatest family fortunes to be a missionary in China. He only got as far as Egypt where, still in his twenties, he died of typhoid fever. Before his death he said, "No reserves, no retreats, no regrets!"¹

¹Billy Graham, Approaching Hoofbeats: The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, (Waco, Texas: Word Books), 1983, p. 94-95.