

SLIMETIMES

Waterballoon Timed Review

Call up three or four volunteers to sit in chairs set in a line. Stand with a waterballoon over the head of the first individual. Have someone set a timer and say go. Ask the first person a review question (or you might want to have someone else ask the questions for you). Continue holding the balloon over his head until he gives the correct answer. Then move to the next student and the next question. Continue moving over each, one at a time, until the timer dings. Whoever you are over when the timer goes off gets wet and then rejoins the other students. Play again with the remaining students until there is only one person left. This winner gets the choice of going home dry or getting the biggest waterballoon (preferably a different type or size of balloon) popped over his head. For an extremely large balloon, you might want to have this student move to a chair set up inside a kiddie pool. Also, always be sure to clean up any water on the floor, especially tile floors, so that no one can slip and fall. (NOTE: This is also a great activity for learning and reviewing the books of the Bible).
